PART II. INTERPRETATION APPLYING
THE VIENNA CONVENTION ON THE LAW OF TREATIES

A. The General Rule

5. The General Rule: (1) The Treaty, its Terms, and their Ordinary Meaning	161
1. A 'Treaty'	162
1.1 The 'treaty' and its 'terms'	164
1.2 The sound of silence—absent and implied terms	165
2. 'Good Faith'	167
2.1 History and preparatory work relating to 'good faith'	168
2.2 Ordinary meaning of 'good faith'	170
2.3 'Good faith' in context and in the light of the Convention's object and purpose	171
2.4 Issues and practice	172
2.4.1 'Good faith' generally	172
2.4.2 'Good faith' meaning reasonableness	176
2.4.3 'Good faith' limiting interpretation of a power	177
2.4.4 'Good faith' requiring balancing of treaty elements	178
2.4.5 'Good faith' and the principle of effectiveness (ut res magis valeat quam pereat)	179
3. 'Ordinary Meaning'	181
3.1 History and preparatory work	182
3.2 Ordinary meaning of 'ordinary meaning to be given to the terms of the treaty'	183
3.3 Issues and practice	184
3.3.1 Role of ordinary meaning	184
3.3.2 Dictionaries and other sources of definitions	186
3.3.3 Literal meanings of single terms	189
3.3.4 No ordinary meaning or no single one?	190
3.3.5 Generic terms	192
3.3.6 'Ordinary' to whom?	193
3.3.7 Treaty language and terms	194
3.3.8 Terms and concepts	195
4. 'Context'	197
4.1 Background and context	198
4.2 Issues and practice	199
4.2.1 Immediate context—grammar and syntax	199
4.2.2 Title, headings, and chapeaux	200
4.2.3 Context showing structure or scheme	202
4.2.4 Related and contrasting provisions	205
4.2.5 Preamble	205
4.2.6 Punctuation and syntax	206
4.2.7 Different meanings of same term in a single instrument	209
4.2.8 Link with object and purpose	210
5. 'Object and Purpose'	211
5.1 History and preparatory work relating to 'object and purpose'	212
5.2 Ordinary meaning of 'object and purpose' in context	212

5.3 Issues and practice	215
5.3.1 Singular object and purpose	215
5.3.2 Finding object and purpose from preamble and substantive provisions	216
5.3.3 Can the object and purpose be used to counter clear substantive provisions?	218
5.3.4 Object and purpose identifying general scope of treaty	219
5.3.5 Object and purpose in a particular provision	220
5.3.6 Principle of effectiveness (general)	221
6. Conclusions	222
6. The General Rule: (2) Agreements as Context, Subsequent Agreements, and Subsequent Practice	223
1. Introduction	223
1.1 The linking notion of agreement	223
1.2 Substantial identity of effect of subsequent agreements on interpretation as of those at time of conclusion	228
1.3 Interpretative agreement in subsequent practice	231
2. Agreements and Instruments Made in Connection with Conclusion of a Treaty	232
2.1 Meaning of 'Conclusion' of a treaty	232
2.1.1 Issues arising as to 'in connection with conclusion' of a treaty	235
2.2 Interpretative role of agreements connected with conclusion of a treaty	237
2.3 Interpretative role of instruments made by one or more parties	239
2.3.1 Instruments covered by article 31(2)(b) of the Vienna Convention	239
2.3.2 Role of unilateral instruments covered by article 31(2)(b)	241
3. Subsequent Agreements	242
3.1 Fact of agreement, not form, is the key factor	243
3.1.1 History and analysis	244
3.1.2 ICJ looks for fact of agreement, not form	246
3.2 Less formal or informal agreement	247
3.3 Formal amendment and changed wording	250
3.3.1 Effect of amending agreements	250
3.3.2 Changed wording in related or comparable agreements	253
4. Subsequent Practice	253
4.1 Elements of subsequent practice	254
4.1.1 History and development of the provision	254
4.1.2 Meaning of 'subsequent practice'	254
4.1.3 Frequency and uniformity of practice	256
4.1.4 Practice may consist of executive, legislative, and judicial acts	257
4.1.5 'Subsequent practice' and 'subsequent conduct' distinguished	259
4.1.6 Practice 'in the application of the treaty'	261
4.2 Deduction from absence of subsequent practice	262
4.2.1 Absence of action	262
4.2.2 Combining action with absence of reaction	264

4.3	Parties participating in the practice	266
4.3.1	Practice must be attributable to parties	266
4.3.2	Agreement, not practice, of all parties is required	266
4.3.3	Practice of some parties only does not interpret a treaty 'inter se' unless so agreed	267
4.3.4	Practice of some parties in absence of that of others	268
4.4	'Establishing' agreement	269
4.5	Subsequent practice linked with informal agreement, understandings, or other instruments	273
4.6	Subsequent practice and 'evolutive' interpretation distinguished	274
4.7	Subsequent practice and amendment differentiated	275
4.8	Subsequent practice in international organizations	280
4.8.1	Whose practice in the organization?	280
4.8.2	Practice in relation to a treaty establishing an organization	281
4.8.3	Practice in relation to treaty provisions other than in constitutions of international organizations	285
4.8.4	Does practice of courts and tribunals constitute precedent?	285
4.9	Possible overlap with relevant rules of international law	287
5.	Conclusions	288
7.	The General Rule (3): Relevant Rules of International Law and Special Meanings	289
1.	Introduction	289

B. Supplementary Means of Interpretation

8.	Supplementary Means of Interpretation	347
1.	Introduction	347
2.	History and Preparatory Work	349
2.1	Separating supplementary means from the general rule	349
2.2	Ready reference to preparatory work distinguished from basing interpretations on it alone	352
2.3	Distinction between use of supplementary means 'to confirm' and 'to determine' the meaning	353
3.	Meaning of 'Recourse' and 'Supplementary'	356
3.1	'Recourse'	356
3.2	'Supplementary'	356
3.3	Further supplementary means	357
3.4	Relationship between supplementary means and the general rule	358
4.	Issues and Practice	359
4.1	Systematic use of gateways, unsystematic use, and by-passing them	360
4.1.1	Explicit reference to the qualifying gateway	360
4.1.2	Reaching the preparatory work informally	361
4.1.3	Incidental use of supplementary means	363
4.1.4	Admitting preparatory work introduced by parties	363
4.2	Confirming meaning	364
4.2.1	Confirming a clear meaning	364
4.2.2	Role of 'confirming' when preparatory work contradicts meaning afforded by application of general rule	366
4.2.3	Using supplementary means to confirm 'intention'	373
4.2.4	Using supplementary means to 'reinforce' an interpretation	375
4.2.5	Using preparatory work as general support	376
4.2.6	Reciting and using preparatory work contrasted	376
4.3	Determining meaning	377
4.3.1	Qualifying conditions: 'ambiguous or obscure' or 'manifestly absurd or unreasonable'	377
4.3.2	Ambiguous by reference to availability of another word having one of the claimed meanings	381
4.4	Modalities of use of supplementary means	382
4.4.1	Using and construing preparatory work	382

4.4.2	Reading preparatory work to show agreement to exclude	385
4.4.3	Deduction from absence from preparatory work	389
4.4.4	Change of word or words during negotiation of treaty	391
4.4.5	Exclusion of preparatory work from consideration	391
4.4.6	May preparatory work be deployed as context?	393
4.4.7	Using preparatory work to identify or confirm object and purpose	394
4.4.8	Effect of interpretation recorded in preparatory work	395
4.4.9	Reading preparatory work in combination with other supplementary means	397
4.5	Circumstances of conclusion and other supplementary means	398
4.5.1	Meaning of 'circumstances of conclusion'	398
4.5.2	Comparison with provisions in other treaties or associated material as a circumstance of conclusion	400
4.5.3	Commentaries, explanatory reports, academic writing, etc	401
4.5.4	Other supplementary means	404
