At the inauguration, the Judge and Vice-President of the Inter-American Court highlighted the importance of drafting and implementing public policy, in accordance with Inter-American and international Jurisprudence, with the aim of contributing to more effectively guaranteeing the rights of indigenous and tribal peoples.

The purpose of this week-long program is to train civil servants from various executive-branch institutions—who by the nature of their functions, work directly on matters related to indigenous and tribal peoples—on the standards of the Inter-American Court specifically related to the rights of these peoples.
